

Full-Time Faculty Position Available

The Master of Science in Biomedical Informatics (M.S.B.I.) Program at Nova Southeastern University College of Osteopathic Medicine (NSU-COM) is inviting applications for a full-time faculty position in biomedical informatics.

The faculty member will be primarily responsible for teaching onsite and online in the field of biomedical informatics (e.g., medical/clinical informatics, public health informatics, computer science/technology in health care) and assisting in the administrative leadership of the program. Other duties include scholarly productivity in the form of publications and receipt of external funding as well as service to the college's departments, university, and local and state communities. Duties will also include student advising and mentoring as well as committee services at department, college, and university levels.

The biomedical informatics program is positioned within NSU-COM, which is part of the NSU Health Professions Division. This location affords individuals the opportunity to work collaboratively with faculty members from diverse health professions such as medicine, public health, pharmacy, optometry, dentistry, and nursing. NSU is the seventh largest independent not-for-profit institution of higher education in the United States with seven campuses in Florida and one in the Bahamas.

Candidates for the position must meet the following requirements:

- A terminal degree (e.g., Ph.D., M.D., D.O., Dr.P.H., Ed.D.) with additional relevant training/experience in biomedical informatics
- Teaching experience (onsite and online) in a higher education environment commensurate with rank
- Experience of leadership roles in health information technology projects
- Evidence of research ability including publications and externally funded projects

Competitive salary and excellent benefit program are offered. Interested persons should forward their curriculum vitae with cover letter and the names of three professional references to Dr. Jennie Q. Lou, NSU-COM, Suite 1578/Terry Building, 3200 South University Drive, Fort Lauderdale, FL 33328-2018.
